Tutor at Mr. Gresson's private school at Worthing; joined Mr. J. W. Gordon's stock Company at Southampton, 1879; three years with Miss Thorne at Margate; the originator of Dashitall in My Sweetheart; joined Miss Mary Anderson's company, also Mr. Laurence Barrett's, both at Lyceum, also Haymarket during run of Jim the Penman; went into management; is the pioneer of the Pastoral Play, 1886, acted by professional actors, having for forty-nine years given Shakespeare, in the open air as well as in theatres to Londoners and the Provincials; parts played include Malvolio, Dogberry, Sir Peter Teazle, Benedick, Shylock, all the Falstaffs, Triplet (over 1000 times), Tony Lumpkin, Friar Laurence, Hamlet, Touchstone, Dromio, the Cardinal in Capt. Robert Marshall's A Royal Family, and three or four hundred others; was associated with Mr. William Poel of the Elizabethan Stage Society in the production of the old morality play Everyman in 1902; took the play to America, where he has become known as actor and producer of Shakespearian plays (1902-14); engaged in work at the Old Vic, Waterloo Road (1914-18), when he produced twenty-four of Shakespeare's plays and fifteen others, including Everyman, and Hamlet in its entirety. He influenced the L.C.C. to allow the children of the schools to attend the Shakespeare plays, and gave up the work at the Vic at the request of the Shakespeare for Schools Committee of the Board of Education to present the plays in every part of London and the suburbs, which resulted in over one million attendances of the London school children at Shakespeare plays—the Geddes Axe descended in 1922 and cut off this interesting movement. Since that time he has continued to give plays under the new action of the L.C.C. in partly restoring the Shakespeare for Schools movement; was partly instrumental in establishing a permanent English Theatre in Paris for the Classics, 1925-27: gained the diploma and gold medal for English productions at the Exposition, 1926. Has continued giving Plays at most of the Schools in England and returned to U.S.A. in 1929-30-1931-32.
